

Ranch: Work Hard, Play Harder

Ranch-style homes were originally connecting to and inspired by the practicality and purpose of classic Spanish-American architecture. As the popularity of the Ranch grew along with a dramatic increase in our leisure time, the style became associated with creating a very informal and casual lifestyle. That theme continues to be played out in color schemes that help create that laid-back feeling. While working the Ranch was once, and still remains, important, relaxing on the Ranch has become the higher priority.

Alkali-Sensitive: Colors that are more likely to fade early when used on highly alkaline surfaces, such as new masonry.

Interior Use Only: Colors with a low resistance to the sun's ultraviolet (UV) rays, causing them to fade.

Low Hide: Colors that are more transparent and may require multiple coats.

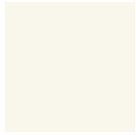

Historic: Colors that are historically accurate.

A well-decorated Ranch home should invite easy living at the the end of a long work day. Kind of like good, old blue jeans, originally meant for work and now known for comfort.

Desert Modern: Nature Adapted

As big and dramatic as the world around it, Desert Modern architecture has taken Mid-century style to the extreme by combining generous use of natural materials and adapting it to the desert environment with massive walls and roof slabs to make desert living thoroughly comfortable. Initially, it appears that so much use of natural material makes paint color secondary and simple, when actually bold and intense color choices can really enhance the drama and visual impact of a desert modern home.

COLOR CHIPS AND PAINT: These color chips are produced as accurately as possible; however, actual paint colors may vary from these samples and from batch to batch. Paint colors are affected by many factors, including lighting, age, type of finish, type of surface and adjacent colors. Some colors may require more than one coat for complete coverage. If final color appearance and color matches are critical, paint should be sampled on the actual surface before full application. Application of the paint constitutes acceptance of the color. Dunn-Edwards assumes no responsibility for color after application.
